PHILOSOPHY OF TEACHING:

“Believe in action, not in beautiful words and expression.”

My teaching philosophy is based on my many years of teaching and learning experience. I believe in the philosophy which is based on student centered method of teaching. I believe that the roles of a teacher are so many and so varied that it is impossible to list them all, but according to me one of the most important role as a teacher is preparing my students to learn not only in classroom, but everywhere and for the rest of their lives. Each student has his own varying abilities, talents, and levels of competence, and as a teacher it's my job not only to recognize this, but to help each student recognize this as well.

I believe that creating our own teaching philosophy is an innovative practice and it should be meaningful part of us as second or foreign language teachers especially in a monolingual country like Saudi Arabia. As an instructor of English language, I keep good rapport with my students not only in classroom but outside the classroom too and this facilitates acceptance, comfort and a safe environment for sharing and exchanging of ideas and thoughts. I have full acquaintance with them in academic and non-academic matters. This creates confidence in the mind of the learners and develops interest in learning a new language in a fruit full way.
